WHAT THE HECK IS A GRIT CHIP™?

After a handful of like-minded friends and business partners put together the concept of The Roswell Tap and began construction and remodeling, the proprietor and former Sleep Diagnostics professional Sean McDonough began his search for unique but simple bar snacks to go with his menu. At a creative meeting with the chef who suggested "tortilla chips and salsa would be good", Sean replied "not in my place ... no salsa, no fish tacos, no bull*#@!, I want American snacks from all over with a focus on the South" and so the story of the grit chips began.

With that direction, the chef and her mother went home and made tortilla chips anyway but added GRITS to the tortilla dough and fried them according to plan. What resulted will be forever known as the first Grit Chip in the history of the world. The chips were then accessorized with a Black Eyed Pea Hummus dip and a collard greens and smoky bacon dip and were served at several parties prior to the Roswell Tap opening. What occurred next is nothing short of the American Dream. The chips began to garner a "cult like" following even months before the June 2011 opening of The Tap. Once The Tap opened in June, the chips and dips sold out on a nightly basis and for the remainder of the summer, the Grit Chips and Dips became the flagship item on the menu and were called Roswell Tap's Original Grit Chips.

While The Tap was finding its way and going through the growing pains of a new restaurant, Sean was asked by a physician that he'd worked with for years to consult on a sleep diagnostic case for Atlanta's own and America's #1 selling comedian; Jeff Foxworthy. Talk about Divine Intervention! After spending some time together, McDonough suggested that Foxworthy come to the Roswell Tap and "do a gig". To this Jeff responded that his fee for nightly "gigs" was pricey but suggested Sean leave a menu and Jeff would think about it.

"What the heck is a Grit Chip?" Foxworthy asked after reading the first item on the menu. "It's a chip made of grits that we invented and is really doing well," McDonough replied. "You have got to bring me some, I love grits!" Jeff responded. A few days later, at the island in Jeff's kitchen, he and his wife tasted the chips and dips and were unable to stop until all chips and dips were gone. This was the birth of Jeff Foxworthy's Southern Creations brand which was created as a result of the Grit Chip.

Today, the Roswell Food Group manufactures Jeff Foxworthy's Grit Chips in 4 flavors and is on its way to becoming a national "player" in the food industry launching its 5th and 6th products in the Spring of 2013. With a decade long agreement with Foxworthy, a manufacturing plant producing Grit Chips and with several additional food and beverage products in development, there seems to be no end in sight for McDonough and his team. And it all began with one simple statement ...
